It explores whether war can ever be justified, including the Just War theory, Holy War, and pacifism. The theme also considers religious responses to war, such as helping victims through charities like Christian Aid and Islamic Relief.	What do Christians and Muslims believe about peace, justice, forgiveness, and reconciliation? Summer 2	Theme E: How do we view crime and punishment? Theme E explores religious attitudes to crime, punishment, and justice, focusing on causes of crime, aims of punishment, and ethical issues. It examines reasons for crime such as poverty, addiction, and greed, and considers whether punishment should be retributive, deterrent, or reformative. Key debates include the use of prison, community service, and corporal punishment, as well as the controversial issue of the death penalty. Christians often emphasize forgiveness and rehabilitation, following Jesus' teaching to "Love your enemies" (Matthew 5:44), while some argue justice requires proportionate punishment. Islamic law includes principles like Shari'ah, which stresses justice and deterrence, but also mercy. The theme also addresses the role of conscience, law, and morality in decision-making. Overall, Theme E considers how beliefs about justice and compassion influence responses to crime in society.	What do Christians and Muslims believe about justice and the aims of punishment?
